THE FUNCTION OF THE INFORMATION QUANTITY IN SOCIAL SYSTEMS

E. Niculescu Mizil, Computer Centre of Chemical Ministry, Bucharest, (Romania)

The paper presents an application of the cybernetic theories to social systems. Its aim is to demonstrate, on the basis of the entropy status analysis of the social systems, the information circulation in such systems, the importance of its ever growing stability depending on the increase of the information quantity the importance of communication. This paper will also deal with the concrete application possibilities of the informational and modelling applications related to the social development of our country. It will mention, as well, the part played by decision theory considered as the substantial element of the social commands with a view to the development of a social system.